Ted W.

Bachelor of Architecture | University of Cambridge
Master of Arts in Architecture | USI Accademia di Architettura di Mendrisio

Ted graduated from the Academy of Architecture in Mendrisio, Switzerland, building a strong foundation in community-oriented urbanism. Prior to his master's degree, he spent nearly two years at David Chipperfield Architects, contributing to high-profile projects in Seoul, London, and Antwerp. This experience sharpened his clear communication, collaborative adaptability, and professional reliability.

His fascination with modelmaking, the terraced house typology, and post-war urban form shaped his undergraduate study at Cambridge and postgraduate research at Mendrisio. By combining rigorous academic training—including a thesis on London's terraced streets supervised by Thomas Weaver—with hands-on international practice, Ted offers a grounded, thoughtful perspective on contemporary architecture and practical, hands-on skill.
